Our editorial standards

Hearst UK Limited is a responsible publisher. It seeks to maintain a high standard of journalism and instils this in the editorial staff through regular training and updates.

Its editorial guidelines are available on Hearst intranet and staff are directed to this upon joining.

We insist upon compliance with the Editors' Code and the relevant legislation. The legal team works closely with Editors and journalists to advise on upcoming publications. Staff submit content to the legal team for review prior to publication where any issues pertaining to the Code (or the legislation) may arise.

Hearst UK Limited uses best practices to ensure that all content is accurate. Our journalists are required to verify all stories by checking facts using reputable sources. Further, all journalists must ensure that their interviewees fully understand the purpose of the interview and consent to the publication of their words. Wherever possible, journalists are required to tape their interviews and keep detailed notes. Freelancers are also required to keep detailed notes and copies of all source materials, to be provided to Hearst UK Limited on request.

Once completed, every article is subsequently reviewed and fact-checked by a subeditor. Finally, where an article is submitted for legal review, the legal team will seek further and sometimes additional clarification of facts and discuss the source of the content with the writer.

IPSO notices are circulated to all Editors when received.

Where Hearst UK Limited receives pre-publication guidance from IPSO, the legal team will discuss the guidance with the Editors and journalists, and review the relevant content in light of IPSO's guidance. Where deemed necessary, the content will be revised. Hearst UK Limited will also communicate any key learnings from IPSO's pre-publication guidance to its editorial teams.

Following the publication of the new version of the Editors' Code and supporting Codebook in January 2018, we informed editorial staff of the changes by email, providing a copy of the Code and Codebook together with guidance on: (i) a comparison of the original and amended clause; (ii) reasons for the amendment; and (iii) advice on the effect of the amendment. The changes to the Editors' Code will also be covered in our Editorial Training (more on this below).

Our complaints-handling process

Hearst UK Limited uses a Complaints Form. The Complaints Form is available as part of our Complaints Policy which is available on all magazine websites and also on the central Hearst website (<http://www.hearst.co.uk/hearst-magazines-uk-complaints-procedure>). When an individual calls, emails or writes to make a complaint, they will be asked to submit the complaint in writing to complaints@hearst.co.uk or directed to the Complaints Policy on the relevant website.

Once a complaint is submitted it is automatically directed to an electronic inbox administered by the legal team. An initial response is provided to the complainant, either asking for further information or acknowledging the complaint and explaining that it is being investigated. An investigation is then carried out by the legal team with the Editor and journalists in question before a full substantive response is provided to the complainant. We then work with the complainant to find a resolution.

Wherever possible, Hearst UK Limited seeks to resolve complaints directly with complainants. However, where we investigate a complaint and in our view there has not been a breach of the Code, we are happy to refer complainants directly to IPSO.

Our training process

Editorial legal training is provided internally on an annual basis to the editorial teams, most recently in Spring 2017. Our 2018 training program will be underway shortly.

The training covers the Editors' Code, defamation, privacy and contempt of court law, as well as information and guidance on other relevant regulations and legislation.

Adverse Adjudications

During the Relevant Period, there have been no adverse adjudications against Hearst UK Limited.

Hearst UK Limited does not publish its editorial guidelines but is happy to make these available to IPSO on a confidential basis for its own review.
